Today: Life in Occupied Palestine – Eyewitness Stories and Photos by Anna Baltzer

Anna Baltzer is a Jewish-American Columbia graduate, Fulbright scholar, and three-time volunteer with the International Women's Peace Service, a human rights organization based in the Occupied Palestinian Territories.

Since 2005 she has been offering presentations describing personal experiences, observations, and photographs from eight months documenting human rights violations in the West Bank and supporting Palestinian and Israeli nonviolent resistance against the Occupation. She hopes to provide those interested in the Israel/Palestine conflict with critical information and documentation that can be difficult to obtain through mainstream U.S. media sources, and to encourage dialogue towards taking action on the issue. As the grand-daughter of Polish-born Holocaust refugees, she also sees it as her responsibility to expose the injustices of today in light of those of the past.

June 8 – Searching for Peace in the Middle East by Landrum Bolling

Former President Jimmy Carter says, “[This] is a superb presentation of the intricate relations between Israelis and Palestinians, presented dramatically by people from both sides. Their combined proposals, clearly presented, comprise the only pathway to peace, with justice, in the Holy Land.

Other Adult Learning Opportunities

How does our faith teach that we should treat 'the other, the neighbor, the stranger'?" An evening of Scriptural Reasoning sponsored by ICPJ's Common Ground for Peace in Israel/Palestine Working Group on Tuesday, June 3rd. The practice grounds discussion in the respective religious texts, encouraging participants to be both self-critical and deeply rooted in their commitments to their own particular faith. Our speakers are: Rev. James Rhodenhiser, Rector of St. Clare's Episcopal Church, Aura Ahuvia of the Ann Arbor Reconstructionist Havurah, a rabbinic student with ALEPH: Alliance for Jewish Renewal also pursuing a Master's degree from the University of
